Thomas St. Peter, a quarryman employed on the J. K. Pirie quarry in Graniteville, was the victim of a peculiar accident Saturday afternoon. While working about the hoisting engine, his shoe became caught in the gear, and before he could extricate the foot the large toe was badly jammed. He was assisted to his home near by, and a physician, who was summoned, dressed the injured member. Although it is not thought that any permanent injury will result, several weeks will elapse before the man can regain normal use of the foot.

"Ah Sing and the Greasers"—a cowboy comedy possessed of real novelty. The "Curly Q" ranch has a Chinese cook, and the cook, of course, has a pigtail. There is not a rider on the ranch who is insensible to the appeal of that pigtail, and Ah Sing is constantly in hot water. Even the boss sympathizes with the boys, and Sing finds no comfort in complaint, so he gives warning that some day he will "get mad." The boss rides to town for the pay-roll, and two greasers plan to hold him up. It's at the Dreamland.

CABOT.

Mrs. Kimball, Noted in Many Ways, Who Died Jan. 1, Native of Vermont.

News has been received of the death of Mrs. Lucretia H. McLean Kimball at the residence of D. S. Fletcher at Washington, D. C., Jan. 1, after but five weeks' illness, at the advanced age of 90 years. She was born in Peacham, July 9, 1820, and was one of a family of six children of Hector and Lucretia McLean. On November 1, 1840, she was united in marriage to Eliphalet Addison Kimball in the church in this village, where they both had been baptized. When the rebellion of 1861 broke out, Mr. Kimball, fired with zeal for his country, enlisted as a federal officer and after but three years' service was suddenly shot down, as he demanded a countersign from an officer of the day. Shortly after this, Mrs. Kimball went to Washington, D. C., and obtained a position in the treasury department, where for nearly half a century she faithfully served, being well posted in national affairs and deeply interested in politics. She had been abroad several times, the last time at the advanced age of 80 years. Through her interest and financial aid, in a modest, unassuming way, several young men had been helped to gain an education and get a start in life. Mrs. Kimball was taken ill Thanksgiving day and, owing to her advanced age, had not strength to endure the extra strain. Funeral services were held at the house where she died, Rev. S. H. Woodrow, pastor of the First Congregational church, officiating. Her remains were taken to Brooklyn, N. Y., and laid to rest beside her husband. She leaves a nephew in Maine.

Typhoid in Politics.

Pure water and pure milk are interesting factors in Rutland's mayoralty campaign. Successive typhoid epidemics have brought matters to a serious point, and if typhoid germs have infected local politics the result may be a cleaner and better water supply for Rutland. George C. Underhill is the first avowed candidate for mayor, and is running on an anti-typhoid platform. He is a candidate, it is stated, solely for the opportunity to fight for purer water and more of it and urges a filtration plant, while other talked of candidates are less radical and are not in a rush to change existing conditions.—Woodstock Spirit of the Age.
